

Jeannie Heffernan is an IP litigation partner in the New York office of Kirkland & Ellis LLP. She has tried over a dozen patent litigation cases in a wide variety of subject matter areas in courtrooms around the country, with particular frequency in the Eastern District of Texas. Jeannie received her law degree and a Master of Arts in Divinity from the University of Chicago and her undergraduate degree from the University of Notre Dame. She is a big fan of college football. But her freshman year when the Irish won the national championship was a long time ago. In the meantime, she hopes the Cubs beat the curse of the Billy Goat and Steve Bartman.
